PREFACE

In the 1960s the National Archives of the United States and the African Studies Association, the professional organization of Africanists, agreed to support a project to locate and identify manuscript records in the United States documenting the history of Africa. Initial funding was provided by the African Studies Association with the assistance of the Ford Foundation and later the National Endowment for the Humanities.

In April 1977 the African Studies Association published the Guide to Federal Archives Relating to Africa. With the publication of that volume and the present volume the National Archives has fulfilled its commitment to the African Studies Association and to the International Council on Archives, which has supported the publication of a series of volumes in the Guide to the Sources of the History of Africa. The series includes publications prepared by the Federal Republic of Germany, Spain, France (two volumes), Italy (two volumes), the Holy See, Scandinavia, the Netherlands, and the United Kingdom.

The volumes in this series are designed to provide assistance to anyone in African studies and to anyone else concerned with the peoples and events on the African continent.

equipment; the amount of manuscript material that may be used at any one time; and restrictions on the carrying of personal property into the research room.

We appreciate the time and effort expended by the numerous librarians and archivists who provided information for this volume. Without their generous time and assistance the guide volume would not have been as comprehensive as we hope that it is. Special credit goes to Steven Christiansen of Provo, Utah, who, as a student volunteer, searched finding aids and manuscript collections at Howard University, Washington, D.C., and prepared many of the entries that appear for Howard University. We are also grateful to the staffs of the Presidential Libraries, who provided the descriptions of their African-related manuscript collections for this volume.

The African Studies Association also generously provided to the National Archives a grant for travel which was used to compile a substantial amount of the information in the guide.

This Guide was completed with the assistance of National Archives staff members. Jessie M. White assisted in typing the material on the Datapoint word processing system, coordinated storage and retrieval of the manuscript with the National Archives ADP Management and Technical Assistance Branch, and followed progress of the copy through to submission to the publisher. Brenda K. Jones assisted in typing the copy into the Datapoint system, oversaw the transfer of the index to a disk by means of optical disk scanning equipment, and assisted in proofreading the camera-ready copy. Kitty Carter and Bettye J. Grier provided typing assistance.

At the end of a long, arduous, rewarding, and educational task, it is our hope that the Guide to Non-Federal Archives and Manuscripts in the United States Relating to Africa and its companion volume, the Guide to Federal Archives Relating to Africa, will remain a valuable aid to researchers for years to come.

Some of the entries in this Guide include terminology now considered antiquated in terms of modern scholarship. Use of these terms is not intended to disparage peoples or events or to detract from the essential value of the documents for historical research. The wording follows descriptions taken from finding aids or annotations provided by those depositories which were not personally examined by the compiler.
